Mining Journal* Editorial Director, Chris Hinde, to head IntierraRMG media arm

IntierraRMG has today announced that Chris Hinde will be joining the organisation as Editorial Director, as well as commencing on the company's Board as an Executive Director.

Dr Hinde is a qualified Mining Engineer (with a BSc and PhD) and has extensive mining experience, ranging from service with Anglo American Corporation in South Africa, through to consultancy work with both SRK in Johannesburg and Golder Associates in the UK. His mining career includes projects in locations as diverse as Botswana, Malaysia and Turkey.

Joining the editorial staff of Mining Journal in 1984, Dr Hinde stayed for 30 months before a period working with the stockbroking subsidiary of Schroder Merchant Bank as a mining analyst. Returning to Mining Journal at the end of 1987, he was later appointed Editorial Director of the organisation.

IntierraRMG CEO, Peter Rossdeutsch said, "I am pleased to announce the appointment of Chris Hinde as IntierraRMG's new Editorial Director. Having recently joined with RMG to create one of the industry's largest and most complete data, analysis and consulting groups, the addition of Chris's unique mining and publishing experience further strengthens our position as the preferred business intelligence provider to the mineral resources sector."

Dr Hinde, who starts with IntierraRMG on 1st March 2012, will be based in London and lead the company's efforts in events, seminars and bespoke reports whilst providing strategy guidance in global media and industry relations.

Confirming his appointment, Dr Hinde stated: "I am delighted to be joining the IntierraRMG team. It is an exciting time for the industry, and the company is perfectly positioned to take advantage of the latest global developments. I look forward to delivering the industry's best range of products and services, and helping IntierraRMG to realise its key strategic goals."
