

Engen supports Gugulethu school for differently-abled learners

14 February 2020

As a company that cares deeply about the communities in which it operates, Engen is assisting a Gugulethu school for differently-abled learners.

South Africa's favourite fuel brand* has contributed therapy and sporting resources to Tembalethu School for Learners with Special Education Needs that will aid the learners to become inclusive contributing members of society.

Engen's commitment to Tembalethu School is part of a joint government-private sector initiative to support developmental interventions, including expanded access for people living with disabilities.

Minister in the Presidency for Women, Youth and People with Disabilities, Ms. Maite Nkoana-Mashabane, attended the official handover of the funds on Friday, 14 February 2020.

The contribution by Engen will provide the school, which offers mother tongue education to isiXhosa learners from Gugulethu, Langa, Nyanga, Philippi, Delft, Mfuleni, and Khayelitsha, with new equipment for neurological and exercise therapy, electronic devices, and sports facilities.

Unathi Magida, Engen's head of Transformation and Stakeholder Engagement says this aligns with the company's commitment to the United Nations Sustainable Development Goals, which endeavour to ensure a better and more sustainable future for all.

"Disability inclusion is also one of Engen's key social investment focus areas, which gives us the opportunity to contribute towards inclusive disability rights in South Africa. We all have a role to play in enhancing the lives of all citizens especially those that are marginalised through disability," adds Magida.

Tembalethu School principal, Ayanda Mtshazo says the school was founded in 1974 with just two teachers in response to a desperate need for an education for isiXhosa-speaking children living with physical disabilities.

"It now it boasts 19 classrooms, eight offices, three therapy rooms, a sick bay, staff room, library, computer room, domestic science kitchen, general kitchen, dining hall, and a boarding dormitory - and offers a mainstream curriculum" comments Mtshazo.

Although the Western Cape Education Department assumed responsibility for the school in 1996, Mtshazo says private funding, fundraising and donations are essential to secure continued support for transport services and the development of learning and therapy programmes.

All of which makes Engen humbled to play a small part in empowering the learners of Tembaletu School, says Khalid Latiff, Engen's General Manager: Corporate Strategy & Communications.

"Engen thanks all involved, with a special word extended to Minister Nkoana-Mashabane for her acknowledgement of Engen's efforts," says Latiff.

"As a company, we are inspired by and support government's efforts to create a better life for all, and sincerely hope that our contribution in this instance helps the learners of Tembaletu School to chart their own destiny, by helping upskill them to become self-sufficient, and intellectually and economically independent."

Deadline approaching for businesses to set up myGovID before AUSKey retires on 27 March

<If you're about to lodge a Business Activity Statement (BAS) through the ATO's Business Portal, now is the time to set up your myGovID.>

On 27 March, the ATO and 26 other agencies are retiring the AUSKey and Manage ABN Connections login credentials. This means anyone accessing the ATO's Business Portal or a range of other government online services will need to start using myGovID.

Once the app is set up, the business owner will need to link their myGovID to their business using the authorisation service called Relationship Authorisation Manager (RAM) and authorise employee access.

The ATO is urging people to set up now before AUSKey retires. The ATO's chief digital officer John Dardo says most people will find myGovID solves a lot of problems they had with AUSKey.

"We've had over five million logins to the ATO Portals using myGovID so far and that's because it's simple, secure and flexible."

Download the myGovID app and link it to your business using RAM today.
